

Quran Memorization Schedule Tracker

A free printable tracker for your new lessons and revision. Fill it in once, then tick it off every day.

My goal

I am memorizing:		Start date:
My pace:	☐ Light ☐ Steady ☐ Intensive	Daily time:
Teacher check-in:		My mushaf:

Light: about 3 lines a day. Steady: about 5 lines a day. Intensive: about 10 lines a day.

Your daily session

New Lesson Your new lines for today.	Recent Revision Lessons from the past 7 days.	Long-Term Revision One part of your older memorization.
--	---	---

Weekly rhythm: Monday to Friday, do all three parts. Saturday is a catch-up day with no new lesson. Sunday is rest.

My long-term revision parts

Split everything you have memorized into 6 roughly equal parts and write each one below. Revise one part a day.

Part	Surahs or juz in this part	Day	Weak spots to watch
Part 1		Monday
Part 2		Tuesday
Part 3		Wednesday
Part 4		Thursday
Part 5		Friday
Part 6		Saturday

Finished a new surah or juz? Add it to the rotation and re-split the parts.

4-week tracker

Write your new lines in the first row of each week. Tick the other two rows when the revision is done.

Week	Part	Mon	Tue	Wed	Thu	Fri	Sat	Sun
Week 1	New lesson
	Recent revision
	Long-term revision
Week 2	New lesson
	Recent revision
	Long-term revision
Week 3	New lesson
	Recent revision
	Long-term revision
Week 4	New lesson
	Recent revision
	Long-term revision

End-of-month review

Lines or pages memorized this month:
What slipped, and why:
My plan for next month:

Missed a few days? Restart with revision first, and keep new lessons small. Read the full guide to building a schedule you can stick to: rahiqacademy.com/quran-memorization-schedule

Want a teacher to listen to your memorization?

Book a free trial class with a qualified Rahiq Academy tutor. One-to-one lessons for kids and adults, with a plan built around your level.

rahiqacademy.com/book-free-evaluation